On Park Farm

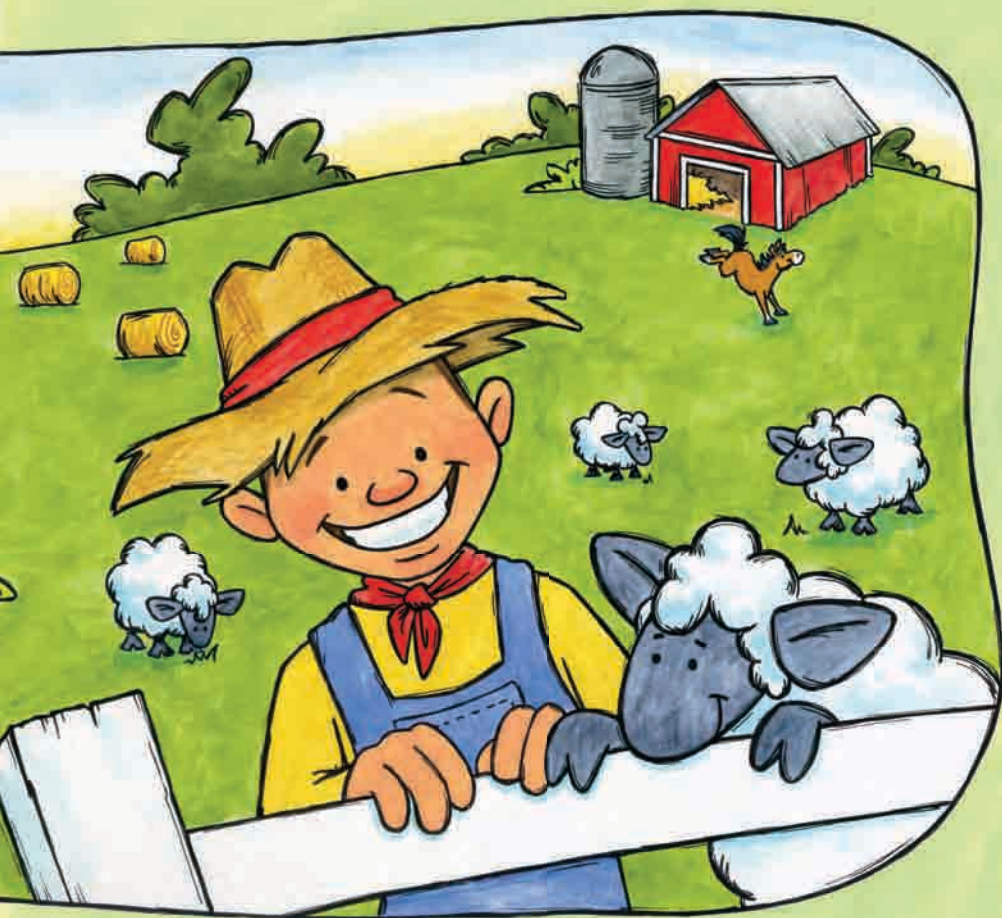

by Winston White

illustrated by Kellie Lewis

You need a car to get to Park Farm.
It is far from town.

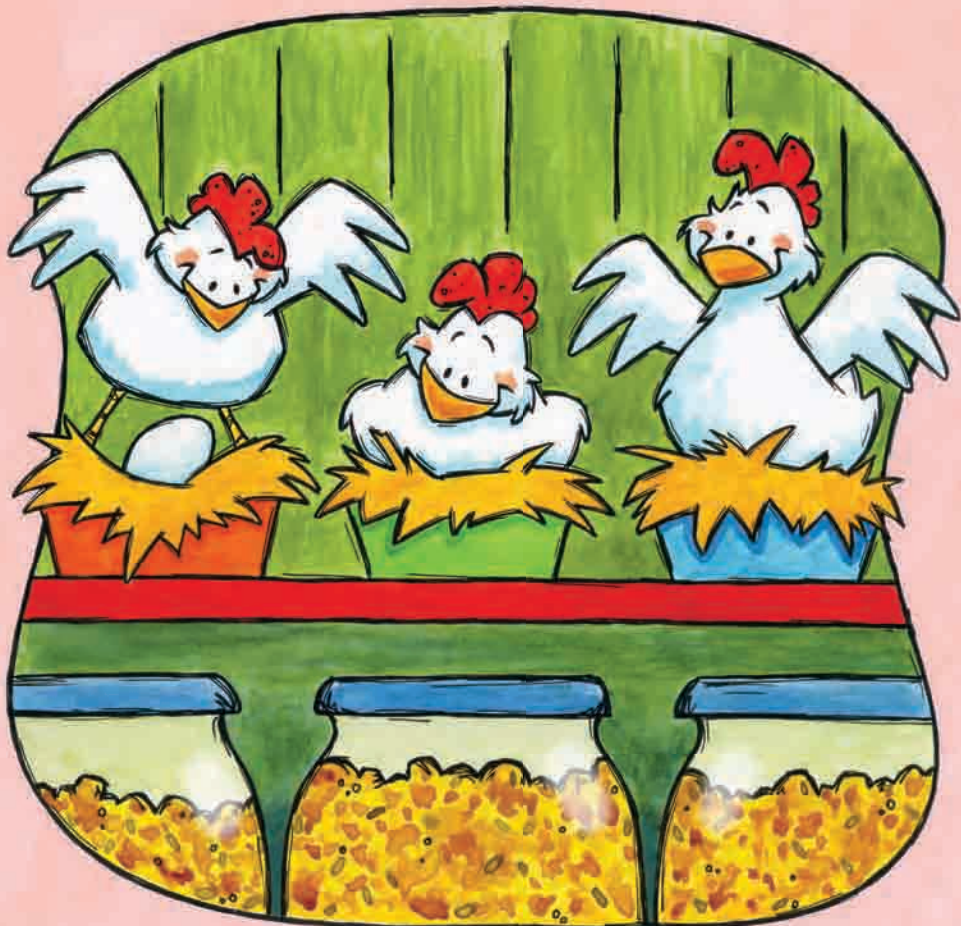

Carl lives on Park Farm. Farm animals live on Park Farm, too. They stay in the barn. The barn keeps farm animals safe from harm.

Art is a dog. Art helps farm animals stay safe. Art is smart. He barks if a fox gets close by the barn.

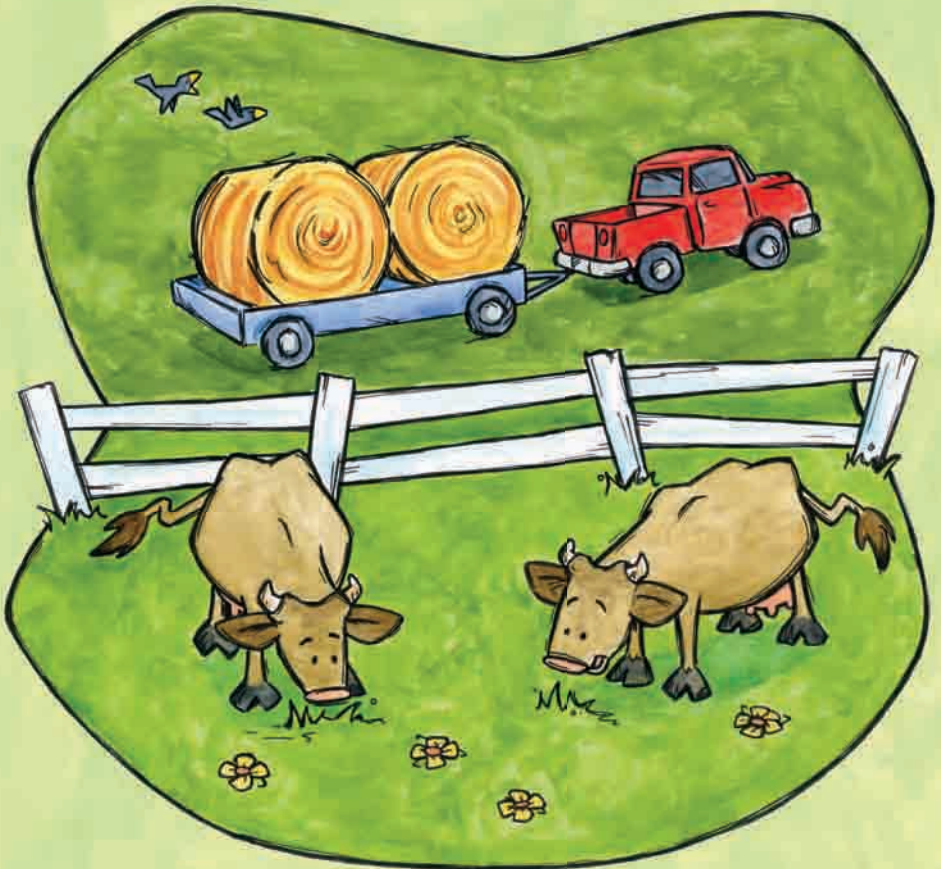

Hens stay in part of the barn.
They eat grain from glass jars. The hens lay eggs in nests. Carl will sell the eggs at the market.

Lambs stay in the barn. When the lambs age, Carl will make yarn. Carl will sell the yarn at the market.

Some animals eat in the farm fields. One has hay in it. Hay is cut and packed on a cart. The cart brings hay to the barn. It will feed farm animals in it.

When the sun starts to set, Carl takes the animals back in the barn. It is bed time on Park Farm. They will sleep while stars light the sky. Carl will sleep as well.

Mark the Star

by Rowan Obach
illustrated by Linda Bronson

One day Mark will be a star. People will say his name far and wide. They will ask him to sign their cards.

Mark might be a film star. He will play parts on the big screen. Mark will say his lines. He will act out parts. He will wave at fans from a big car.

Mark might be a star who plays the harp. He will work hard. Mark will play fine tunes. People will clap and clap.

Mark might be an art star. He will make fine art. Mark will carve stone.
His art might be seen in a park.

Mark might be a star at sea. He will see a whale stuck on the sand. Mark will save the whale from harm. He will help the whale get back in the sea.

Mark might be a star in a car. He will go to the starting line. Mark will dart in a fast car around the track. He will win a prize.

One day, Mark will be a star. It is his big dream.
